This analysis is limited in scope to its property tax assessment related provisions.

Summary: Provides that the addition of an accessory dwelling unit on a single-family lot or a junior accessory dwelling unit to real property will not trigger a reassessment of the underlying land or other structures on the property.

Fiscal Impact Summary: No fiscal impact.

Existing Law: California's system of property taxation values property at its 1975 fair market value, with annual increases limited to the inflation rate, as measured by the California Consumer Price Index, or 2 percent, whichever is less, until the property changes ownership or is newly constructed. At the time of the ownership change or completion of new construction, the value of the property, for property tax purposes, is reassessed based on current market value (called the "base year value").¹ Thereafter, the base year value is subject to annual increases for inflation. This value is referred to as the "factored base year value."²

New Construction. When additions or substantial alternations occur, the law requires the assessor to increase the property's assessment to reflect the value of "newly constructed" property.³ The assessor assigns the assessable new construction with its own distinct base year value. The remainder of the property's assessment is unaffected and retains its base year value.⁴

Proposed Law: This bill provides that the underlying land or other structures on the property not be reassessed when an accessory dwelling unit on a single-family or junior accessory dwelling unit is assessed as new construction.

In General: California's Property Tax System. Voters changed California's property tax system through Proposition 13, which replaced a current market value-based system with an acquisition value-based system. Under Proposition 13, real property assessed values were set at 1975 market value levels and future assessed value increases were limited to the inflation rate, not to exceed 2 percent, for as long as the property's ownership remains unchanged and the property is not substantively improved (i.e., new construction). The 2 percent maximum inflation adjustment ensures modest assessed value increases, assuming no ownership changes or substantive property improvements.

New Construction. The California Constitution does not define the terms "new construction" or "newly constructed." RTC section 70 defines these terms to mean:

² Article XIII A, section 2, of the California Constitution (Proposition 13).

³ RTC section 70.

⁴ RTC section 71.

- Any addition to real property, whether land or improvements (including fixtures), since the last lien date.
- Any alteration of land or any improvements (including fixtures) since the last lien date that constitutes a "major rehabilitation" or that converts the property to a different use.

RTC section 71 requires an assessor to determine a new base year value for the portion of real property that has been newly constructed and provides that the base year value of the remainder of the property assessed, which did not undergo new construction, does not change.

Background: Existing law authorizes a local agency to provide by ordinance for the creation of accessory dwelling units in single-family and multifamily residential zones and requires the accessory dwelling unit comply with certain conditions.⁵ An "accessory dwelling unit" is defined as an attached or a detached residential dwelling unit that provides complete independent living facilities for one or more persons and includes permanent provisions for living, sleeping, eating, cooking, and sanitation on the same parcel as a single-family dwelling is situated.⁶ An accessory dwelling unit also includes an efficiency unit⁷ and a manufactured home.⁸ A "junior accessory dwelling unit" is defined as a unit that is no more than 500 square feet in size and contained entirely within an existing single-family structure. A junior accessory dwelling unit may include separate sanitation facilities, or may share sanitation facilities with the existing structure.⁹

Commentary:

1. Summary of Amendments. Related to property taxation, the April 11, 2018 amendments provide that (1) an accessory dwelling unit or a junior accessory dwelling unit on a single-family lot will be valued for property tax purposes based exclusively on the value of the ministerial permit (GC sections 65852.2(i) and 65852.22(h)), and (2) neither will trigger a reassessment of the value of the underlying land or other structures on the property. The April 16, 2018 amendments strike the requirement that an accessory dwelling unit or junior accessory dwelling unit on a single-family lot will be valued for property tax purposes based exclusively on the value of the ministerial permit and instead require that the underlying land or other structures on the property not be reassessed when an accessory dwelling unit or junior accessory dwelling unit is assessed as new construction.
2. Valuation of New Construction. When assessable new construction is added to real property, the assessor is required to assess the new construction at fair market value. Existing law specifies that only the newly constructed portion of property is assessed and that the base year value of the remainder of the property assessed, which did not undergo new construction, does not change.¹⁰ Thus, this bill, as amended, is consistent with these provisions in the Revenue and Taxation Code. The author may want to reconsider whether it is necessary to restate this in the Government Code.
3. Related Legislation. Assembly Bill 2890 (Ting) requires that an accessory dwelling unit on a single-family lot or a junior accessory dwelling unit be valued exclusively on the basis of the Costs: The State Board of Equalization would incur some minor absorbable costs in informing local county assessors, the public, and staff of the law changes.

Revenue Impact: This bill as amended would have no direct revenue impact.
